Stephen Hales b c1551; [? (at St Alban Hall, Oxford) 1572; (B.A.) 31 Jan 1576.7]; (was devised the presentation to a prebend in Bangor cathedral)

He died in 1574: in his will, made 17 Feb. and proved 26 June of that year, he requested a simple burial, accompanied by a sermon from a godly preacher. Of his sons, Timothy and Robert were to receive £100 apiece, while Stephen was left the presentation to a prebend in Bangor cathedral. His dye-house, water mill and other properties in Coventry were to be sold to meet debts. Charles, the heir, and the widow were appointed executors, [PARL]

(founded a free school at Coventry)
[NOTE: Overseer of his will was Robert Beale]
[ODNB]

After the dissolution of the monasteries Hales acquired confiscated ecclesiastical property in Bishopsgate, London (1541), and extensive lands in and around Coventry. He established a free school in St John's Hospital, Coventry, possibly at the request of Henry VIII, after whom it was named. Rather than endow the school, as was the original intention, Hales merely provided an annual stipend until his death, thereby displeasing numerous local officials. ... In 1550 he was freed [from The Tower of London and both sold and enfeoffed his various properties to his brother Stephen and to [Sir Ralph] Sadler. ... Unmarried, he left most of his estates in Warwickshire, including Hales Place, to his nephew John, son of his brother Christopher. [ODNB]
